COMBAT OPERATIONS

CHRONOLOGICAL NARRATIVE
COMBAT OPERATIONS
NOVEMBER 1944

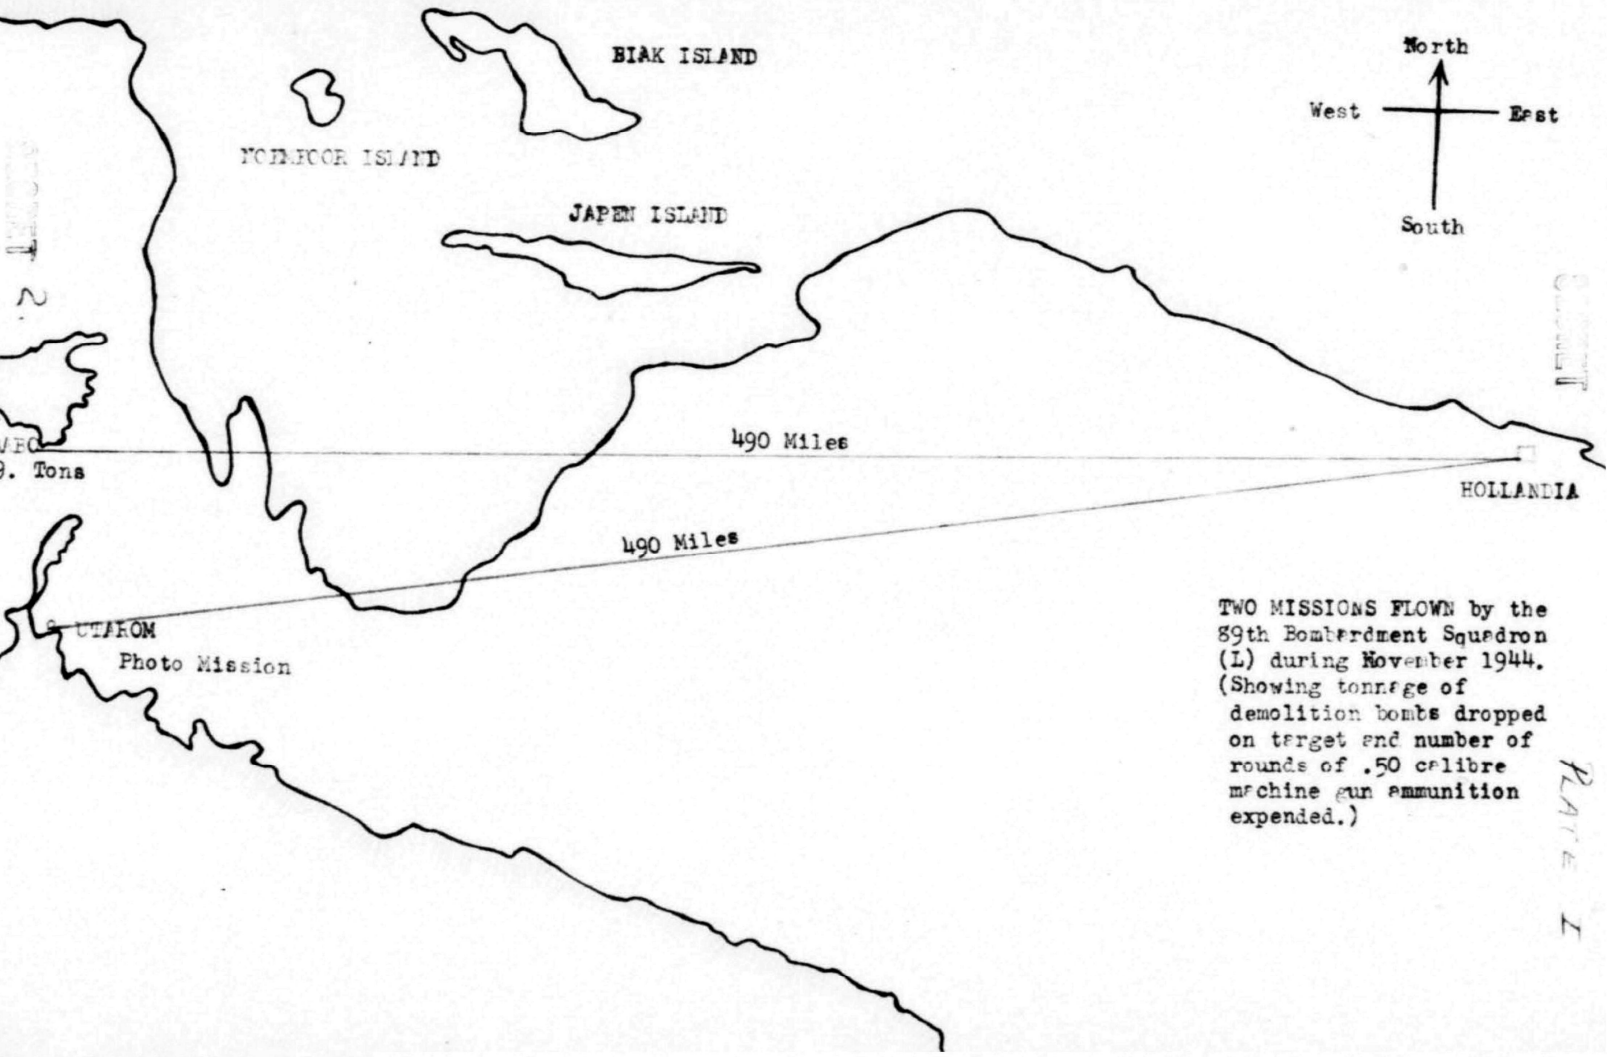

During the month of November only two missions were flown by the 89th Bombardment Squadron (L), totalling 12 combat sorties with 9 tons of bombs dropped on target and nil ammunition expended in strafing. (1) (Plate I)

One B-25J was lost to the squadron through transfer, but at the end of November the squadron still had the same 16 A-20Gs. A total of 64:25 combat hours were flown. (2).

On 1 November the target was the A/A positions in vicinity of 8W (Babo Drome). 9 A-20Gs and 1 B-25 dropped 36 x 500 lb. 1/10 second delay bombs in assigned target area between positions 8W and the hospital. Damage could not be assessed due to excessive dirt clouds caused by exploding bombs. (3).

On 3 November the 89th flew a photo mission on Uterom Strip. Two planes reached the target and made one run on each strip, the first run at 7100 feet and the second run at 7400 feet. Nil bombs were dropped and nil ammunition was expended. (4).

LOCAL INTEREST

After sweating out a move for a long time, the 89th Bombardment Squadron (L) finally left APO 565. The ground echelon had a very nice trip by LST up to APO 72, while the air echelon stayed behind with no showers, poor food, and only one jeep left for the entire squadron. After the new camp area was set up at APO 72 life wasn't so bad. We had a good high camp area so the rain didn't bother us too much. Seeing a new place and a new type of people who could talk English with us made it a nice change from New Guinea. Towards the end of the month the main topic of discussion was "when will the planes get here?" In the meantime as much time as possible was spent in "the Sack."
